EXPERIMENT 11: Deploying a Zoho Creator Application from Development to Production Environment

Aim

To study the process of deploying the Student Admission Management System from the development environment to the production environment using Zoho Creator.

Procedure

1. Log in to Zoho Creator using the registered account credentials.

2. Open the Student Admission Management System from the application dashboard.

3. Navigate to the application's development environment.

4. Review the existing Student Admission form, student reports, workflows, and other application components.

5. Verify that all required student and admission fields and configurations are properly saved.

6. Test the application by entering sample student admission details.

7. Check whether form submissions, report displays, and configured workflows function correctly.

8. Open the application's environment management or deployment settings.

9. Review the available options for deploying the application from Development to Production.

10. Select the appropriate deployment option and review the changes included in the deployment.

11. Validate the application components and resolve any errors identified during the deployment checks.

12. If production deployment is available, proceed with the deployment and confirm the operation.

13. Open the production environment and verify that the deployed forms, reports, and workflows function correctly.

14. Document the deployment process and its outcome.

SCREENSHOTS:

Insert screenshots of your application development environment, form, reports, testing, deployment settings, and production environment here.

Observation

Zoho Creator provides environment management features to develop, test, and deploy applications. The Student Admission Management System can be reviewed in the development environment before deployment. Forms, reports, workflows, and other application components can be validated to ensure proper functionality before releasing the application to the production environment.

Result

Thus, the deployment process of the Student Admission Management System from the development environment to the production environment was studied using Zoho Creator.
